After graduating College, Eric J. Spirtas immediately joined his brother, Joel, in developing one of the regions largest specialty environmental remediation firms, Spirco Environmental.

While Eric has worked at the Spirtas Wrecking Company for 16 years even during his term at Spirco, Eric has served as its President for 8 years. He has managed massive growth as the firm shifted from a local demolition force to one of the nation's largest specialty demolition / environmental contractors.

Eric has set the standard in the industry by his commitment to safety, quality, and recycling and by utilizing the newest technologies.

Eric has worked on nationwide projects including the demolition of Denver's Mile High Stadium, McNichols Arena, Green Bay's Lambeau Field and St. Louis' Sports hockey arena.

Through Eric's efforts, Spirtas Wrecking Company has transformed the skills and abilities developed in responding to local fires, collapses, and natural disasters to become a nationally recognized and sought leader in the area of emergency response. Projects include the 1998 Oklahoma tornado cleanup, the Oklahoma I-40 bridge collapse earlier this year, Kansas City Light and Power plant explosion, fires at UE Labadie and Venice power plants, and grain elevator explosions in Mississippi, Kansas, and Iowa.

Eric has actively promoted the recycling of construction and demolition material.

Currently Eric J. Spirtas has organized a wholly owned and operated firm known as EJ Spirtas Group, LLC. It specializes in the Professional Management and Consultation related to the industry of demolition and environmental remediation. It can offer the services of bid and specification design, administration, procurement and the related construction management services associated with such.
